At both Ashmore Park Nursery and Phoenix Nursery we believe that our pedagogical approach promotes many fundamental British Values.

We have a pedagogy of 'listening' where staff recognise that all children have a voice which is listened to. Adults listen to children, children listen to children and children listen to adults. The democracy of the group is highly valued and promoted through a variety of learning opportunities such as project work, reflection time and small group work. Children learn that they are valued and their thoughts and ideas are respected by both adults and their peers.

Children learn about different faiths and values through the celebration of different cultural festivals, and the sharing of stories as well as acknowledging, recognising and discussing the similarities, and differences which exist amongst us all, promoting the beginnings of tolerance.

Within each group children learn to listen to each other, value what each other has to say and also learn that their opinion may differ. When these opportunities occur, adults encourage children to understand that a difference of opinion is a good thing and it is valued, adults evolve this type of discussion by asking children what they think.

Encouraging children to be respectful is a priority. From the beginning of their time with us, children are encouraged to be respectful towards each other, towards adults and towards nursery resources. The expectation for learning behaviours is high. As stated in the Behaviour Policy, there are two key rules in School regarding behaviours e.g. Be Kind and Be a Good Listener. The symbols referencing these rules are clearly displayed in each Keyworkers area. Adults in Nursery constantly use these rules in their everyday practice with the children and expect children to know, and use these rules to evolve mutual respect, and to learn right from wrong.

Whilst children are attending one of our Nurseries their personal and social development is of paramount importance. Without self-confidence and self-esteem children cannot be effective learners and citizens of their community. Outcomes for children in these areas of learning are excellent and these skills, attributes and attitudes place them in a good position for future understanding of what makes us active citizens in modern Britain.
